

FLAG Foreign Law Guide

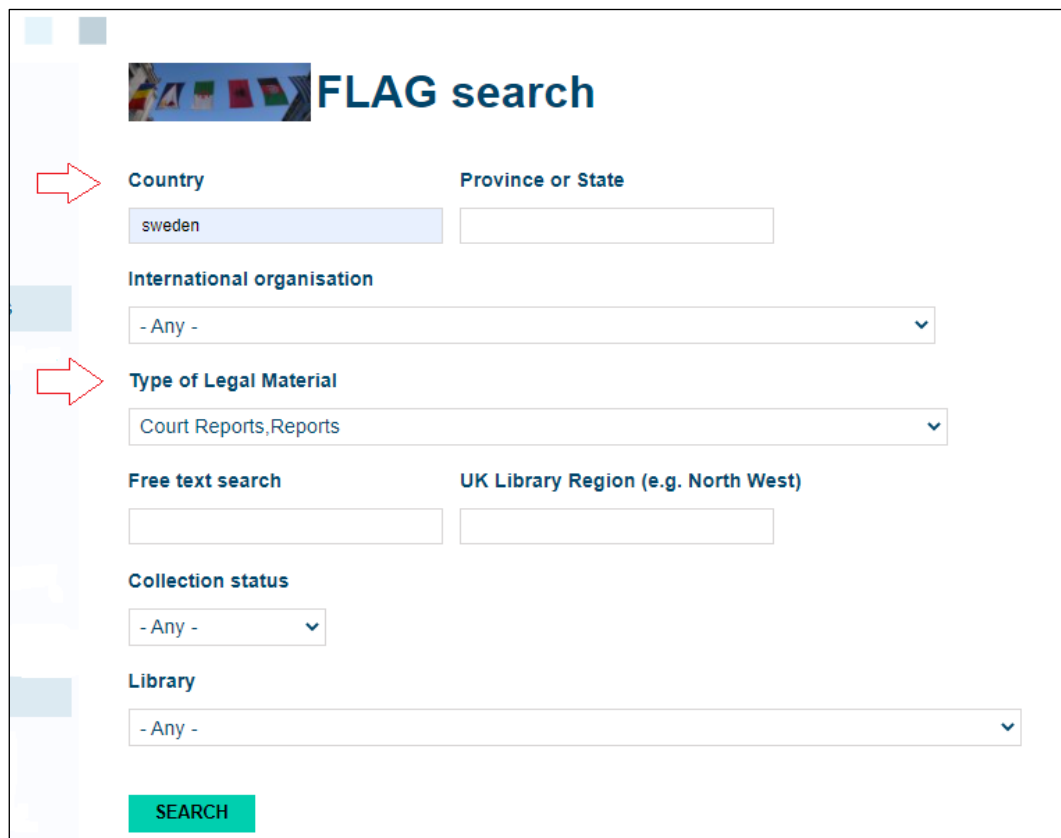

<https://ials.sas.ac.uk/flag-foreign-law-guide/flag-search>

IALS Library's FLAG database is a tool for locating primary foreign and international law material in more than sixty libraries around the UK: national libraries, university libraries, The National Archives and the Inns of Court.

Researchers can use FLAG to find foreign legislation and cases, treaties, international cases and other material without having to know publication titles.

How to search

Select a country/international organisation and a material type. Add other criteria as required.

The screenshot shows the FLAG search interface with the following fields and values:

- Country: sweden
- Province or State: (empty)
- International organisation: - Any -
- Type of Legal Material: Court Reports, Reports
- Free text search: (empty)
- UK Library Region (e.g. North West): (empty)
- Collection status: - Any -
- Library: - Any -

A red arrow points to the Country field, and another red arrow points to the Type of Legal Material dropdown menu. A green SEARCH button is located at the bottom of the form.

The most popular material types on FLAG are:

Court reports, reports

Legislation, session laws (in date order) – acts as passed

Legislation, delegated legislation (in date order) – secondary legislation as made

Legislation, official gazettes

Legislation, statutes (subject compilations) – sets of revised statutes from common law jurisdictions

Legislation, codes – typically used for codified statutes from civil law jurisdictions

If unsure which material type to select, leave the field blank, or use the Free Text field to enter 'legislation', 'court reports' or other terms.

The full FLAG record includes a description of the collection, the name of the library holding it, the shelfmarks at which it can be found, and the accrual status of the collection (whether it was still being added to last time it was checked).

Collection/accrual status

Each time the FLAG database is updated, information is gathered about which collections are still active and which are closed. The last FLAG update was carried out in 2013, when each of the 63 libraries was visited and their collections surveyed in the major 'FLAG Rebuild' project. Any collection that was still being added to at this time has 'Active as at 2013' on its FLAG record:
